During February 2020, information sessions will be held at greyhound racing clubs to give participants the opportunity to discuss with the Commission what the draft Code means for them, and how they might be affected. Information session details including dates, times and locations will be shared with participants once confirmed.

Participants will be given reasonable time (up to 10 years) to comply with areas of the new Code that require financial investment. For all other parts of the Code, participants will be required to comply from the effective date.

When will the new Code become effective?

Once the public consultation period has finished, all feedback and submissions will be considered and the final Code will be developed. The final Code will then be presented to the NSW Government for endorsement. An effective date (not before 1 July 2020) for the Code will then be confirmed.

Participants and industry stakeholders will be advised once the effective date for the new Code has been confirmed.

When will participants need to be compliant with the new Code?

Participants will be given reasonable time (up to 10 years) to comply with areas of the new Code that require financial investment. For all other parts of the Code, participants will be required to comply from the effective date.

New participants that enter the industry after the new Code's effective date, will be expected to be fully compliant with the new Code.
