

The Inside Rail

Using traffic lights to stop infection

When it comes to protecting the health of your greyhounds in the event of an infectious disease, we recommend using the 'traffic light' system.

Red: Greyhounds with confirmed infection. Isolate from other greyhounds. Keep bedding etc separate.

Yellow: Been in contact with infected greyhound, but shows no signs of illness. Keep these greyhounds separate from healthy and infected greyhounds.

Green light: No contact with red or amber greyhounds, showing no signs of illness. Keep separate to isolated or quarantined greyhounds.

We're ambassadors

Be respectful. Be responsible.

They are the keys to keep in mind when speaking or writing publicly about the greyhound racing industry and the people who are involved. It is an offence to use improper, insulting or offensive language in relation to a controlling body, club or committee and their employees/members.

It's a good kind of different for GWIC

We've given our website home page a refresh to make it easier to find the information you want from forms and news to disciplinary outcomes. Check it out today!

www.gwic.nsw.gov.au

The Race Well substance validator smartphone app has more than 1,300 searchable products. It's free to download.

SCAN

From the Stewards' box

BE TIMING WISE: For any trial that requires a veterinary clearance to be undertaken, the greyhound must arrive 30 minutes prior to the kennels opening. The required paperwork must also be ready for the On-Track Veterinarian to complete. You will be emailed details for the trial prior.

Code of Practice

Part 8: Training, Trialling and Racing

Greyhounds must be presented for examination by an On-Track Veterinarian prior to starting in a race

Any injury suffered by a greyhound during a race must be reported by the participant to the attending steward and On-Track Veterinarian

Any request made by a steward or On-Track Veterinarian to seek veterinary treatment for a greyhound must be followed.